DO NOT WHINE IN LETTERS TO BOYS IN CAMP

Dr. Broomfield Preaches of Impressions Gained While With Soldiers

IS CLOSER TO GOD

Says Folks Back Home Must Also Gain in Their Faith.

Let the letters to the boys in camp bristle with optimism said Rev. J. C. Broomfield, D. D. in addressing 700 people in the Methodist Protestant Temple on Sunday morning, and do not let one sentence cause them any anxiety. If homefolks write to them when things go wrong the result is that if they cannot get a furlough they take "French leave and a court martial follows."

In the way of introduction Dr. Broomfield said that he was free to admit that his morning congregation was not always as large as it was on Sunday and he concluded from that he was addressing the people of Fairmont and many who have loved ones in the cantonments. His address on "Experience and Impressions in Camp" Sheridan was based on three fundamental points: "The Dangers Confronting the Church," "The Reality of God" and "The Reality of Sin and the Efficacy of the Old Gospel to Solve the Question." In his humble judgment after the war the church of Christ would face its greatest crisis but he does not fear that God will work out his plan. The speaker was more afraid for the individual.

"I thought I knew God intimately, but God means more to me today than he ever did before. If I have done no good in the camp I have done one thing for myself and that is to know God as I never knew Him before. Why was God more real to me? Away from the comforts of home and from a man's loved ones a soldier inclined in the right direction has no one else to lean on so God is his refuge."

Letters from the mothers, sisters and sweethearts go to show that God is "more increasingly real" than ever before. God is more real to the folks back home than He ever was before because they are now living in a life of anxiety. Frequently soldiers come to me and show me their letters, being careful to hold their hands over the top and bottom. The last sentence always deals with God and the necessity of lifting up prayers to God. While making my rounds in the base hospital, where the tubercular patients are located, I came across a boy infected with the white plague. He was passed by the draft board, but the rainy season of the south had so broken down his health that he was sent down to the base hospital. As I entered the room I noticed he had a red covered book tucked under his pillow and I added, "Wonder what the right book." Later he drew from his pillow a double sheet of letter paper, which was sent to him by his young bride. On this letter was written the 121 Psalm, "I will lift up mine eyes to the hills," etc. God is "increasingly more real" to the young man soiled as he informed me that he would soon leave for his home in Columbus, O. These incidents are numerous. Another soldier boy had a pair of blankets sent by his mother, who stated in a letter that before she had forwarded them that she had put her arms around them and had prayed that God might protect her boy.

Touching on the reality of sin Dr. Broomfield continued: "Since I have been in the camp life I learned so many new varieties of sin, which is due to the fact that there are no women or children there or the normal restraint of society with the result that they are careless in their habits. I sometimes feel as if I had been

TWIN SPEND HALF THEIR LIFE AT SEA

Winken and Blinken and the Nurse, one day, sailed off in a wooden shoe—which grows up in the water and is never seen again, having spent half their life at sea, on one vessel, and the other four weeks in a Far-away Land—Australia. Winken's real name is Joan Margaret Waite, and drizzled through a shower. I am now hard at work trying to draw the distinction between shipwreck and good-natured piracy. Certainly, shipwrecking is there and I saw more gambling in the company streets than anywhere else. One of the Sammies reasoned it out like this with me: "Well Doc here are 150 fellows with a dollar and a half apiece after they have their allowance deducted for the folks back home and paid their Liberty Bond allotment. What good is a dollar and a half. You can't do anything with that, but if two or three fellows get all of them why it will amount to something."

Dr. Broomfield told of a soldier boy named W. E. Brandt, of Cleveland, O., acknowledging Jesus as his personal saviour before a large array of Sammies. His application was brought here by Dr. Broomfield and he was unanimously elected a member of the M. P. Temple, of Fairmont, at Sunday morning's service. Reluctantly Dr. Broomfield took a check for $7.50 from him, which was turned over to the church treasurer. His people have extensive packing interests in Cleveland.

Dr. Broomfield told how he succeeded in having a Sammie, who shooed him "cut out" swearing; but the speaker intimated that he almost had to be a second Job to get away with that. At the close of the first day he saw the fellow, who said that he had never known the miles to be so well. He added, "I had a hard day of it, but I won out."

One of the most powerful thoughts dropped by Dr. Broomfield was that she was glad to hear the good news and added, "It is my duty to follow his example." Reports show that the morale of the army had improved wonderfully. Dr. Broomfield reiterated the statement, "Fairmont does not take the war seriously, but added that he would if they heard the grenader and bomb explode. A more thrilling word picture of duty was drawn than that which told of one of the boys in the trenches, who although covered with vermin and could not have a change of clothes was more frequently than once in ten days was as happy as at any time since he led his wife to the altar.

Mention was made that Evelyn and Mildred Satterfield, ages 7 and 9 years, of this city, had sent Dr. Broomfield a money order for seven dollars, which they had saved by dispensing with a Christmas tree. The ladies have also brought war time draft stamps and are sewing for the Sammies, despite their tender years.

As a closing thought Dr. Broomfield said that he was perfectly willing to go anywhere God sent him, and saved the camp uplift workers have appealed for Dr. Broomfield's return. He is in Fairmont on a month's leave of absence pending a decision.

Keener Not Guilty of Violating the Law

Effort to prove that J. E. Keener, of Kingmont, had violated the 26-hour law was not sustained this morning before Justice Conaway when the case was tried. The state's witnesses did not appear to be dead sure of their contentions. The Keener did not work while one witness said he had seen Keener carrying coal on one occasion. Attorney Harry Shaw, who represented Keener, practically used the state's witnesses as the basis of having the charges dropped, which was the ultimate result.

At the partial hearing on Saturday afternoon fully seventy-five people were present.

Million Dollar Blow In Ohio Killed Six

COLUMBUS, O., March 11.—Reports continue to dribble in to show that Saturday's tornado wrought perhaps more than a million dollars worth of damage in Van Wert and Spaulding counties, Ohio, where it did its greatest destruction. It is believed today that number of deaths will not exceed 6 or 7.

The storm track which contains much evidence that the wind was a "twister" was as narrow as 50 yards in some places while in other places it spread into a wind storm miles wide.

TWINS SPEND HALF THEIR LIFE AT SEA

Winken and Blinken and the Nurse, one day, sailed off in a wooden shoe—which grows up in the water and is never seen again, having spent half their life at sea, on one vessel, and the other four weeks in a Far-away Land—Australia. Winken's real name is Joan Margaret Waite, and Blinken's is John Herbert Waite. Their father is Professor J. H. Waite of the Rockefeller Institute who has been doing research work in New Guinea. Their mother died in Australia when they were born. The tiny twin adventurers are now on their way to grandmother in Harrisburg, Penn.

JUDGE HAYMOND

dion of the grand jury as to any violations of the election laws. "The court said he did not know of any but there were several elections to be held and that if any violations resulted the prosecuting attorney would no doubt present the facts. The laws governing the weight and measure of coal were reviewed. He referred to the heavy penalties for any advantage an operator might take of the blower.

Strenuously Judge Haymond opposed the violations of the laws governing the speed rate of automobiles. One of the dangers and penalties to life and limb is the automobile speeding. Up until this time the acts of the legislature as to the rights of the public have been brushed aside and to date the court knew of no prosecution or arraignment of any of the alleged violators. The court then told of the many lives that were being lost because of recklessness, which repeatedly and continuously goes on. The pedestrian, the court contended, has just as much right on the road as a man in a conveyance or one in a powerful automobile. Although he sounds his horn the autoist can not take that as sufficient grounds to run down man in the road. Of course the man who is walking should not retard his pace in getting out of the way of the automobile either.

If the public's rights are not preserved he did not believe it warranted the county court in spending thousands and tens of thousands of dollars in butt-race courses and speed tracks for automobiles.

Judge Haymond predicted that more severe laws would have to be passed to curb the reckless speeding of automobiles, because it has become a menace in our midst.

Clarence Curry, of Monongah, is acting as clerk in the absence of W. S. Black, who is confined to his home because of illness.

R. L. Cunningham of this city, was appointed foreman of the grand jury. Mr. Cunningham took the oath at which the other jurors subscribed to it.
